The Columbia Register states that an unusually large crowd of representative ladies and gentlemen gathered in the Y. M. C. A. to hear Comptroller General Verner speak on the "Influence of the Scotch-Irish upon the State politically, mentally and morally." The speaker was introduced by Dr. S. H. Smith, and opened his address by citing many of the hardships which religion had undergone, and as a result the Scotch-Irish sought this country in pursuit of religious freedom. After picturing their early settlements, especially in this State, he showed how their influence was felt in the provincial schools, then in the colleges and finally in the establishment of the South Carolina University. The address was listened to from beginning to end with marked interest, and the large audience left well pleased, and those who claim Scotch-Irish blood felt proud of their ancestry. The lecture committee are arranging for another lecture to be given the last of the month.

The State Board of Agriculture was in session in Columbia last week. The movement to establish a national board of agriculture was endorsed and also the suggestion of the New Jersey board that all reports of the boards of horticulture be sent through the mails free. Dr. Duncan and T. J. Moore were appointed a committee to confer with J. S. Reynolds, of Spartanburg, to arrange for the publication of the official bulletins and monthly reports in his patent newspaper outside. An appropriation of five thousand dollars was made to continue the experimental work at Darlington and Spartanburg. Dr. McBryde, the director of the experimental stations, was instructed to ascertain by experiment the quantity of okra fibre that could be produced to the acre on upland and bottom lands, and the cost of preparing fibre. He was also requested to furnish for publication in the monthly reports the results of the experimental work at the stations. Governor Hagood offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted: "The State Board of Agriculture recognize with pride the fact that in competition with the whole United States the largest crop of corn grown has been by a South Carolina farmer. They further recognize the fact that this is the largest authenticated yield of Indian corn ever grown on one acre in any part of the world. Therefore, Resolved, That the thanks of the Board be and are hereby tendered to Mr. Z. J. Drake for the honor he has conferred by his achievement on his native State and the demonstration he has made of the possibilities of her soil and climate. Mr. Drake is requested by the Board to report the future yields of crop on the prize acre with the details of fertilization and workings."

Rev. M. C. Carlisle on the Second Blessing Theory.

As previously announced, Rev. M. C. Carlisle preached last Sunday at 11 A. M. in the Methodist church, taking for his theme the second blessing theory, and concluding his remarks from the preceding Sunday on the great doctrine of "Holiness," or "Sanctification." The text was 1st Peter, 3, 15-16: "But sanctify the Lord God in every heart; and be ready to give an answer to every man that asketh you, a reason of the hope that is in you, with meekness and fear; having a good conscience; that whereas they speak evil of you, as of evil doers, they may be ashamed of your good conversation in Christ." He began by repeating the position of the Methodist church on this important doctrine of Christianity as given in his first sermon. This doctrine is held to be that regeneration is sanctification begun, and that there is continual advance in the state in which the work of conversion leaves one; in other words, that holiness is the maturity of the graces resulting from regeneration.

Having thus briefly defined the doctrine, as held by at least nine-tenths of the Methodist church to day, the able divine devoted the major part of his discourse to the discussion of the second blessing theory, which is, that there is necessary a second instantaneous change after conversion by which one is made perfectly holy, which second change is the result of a second and distinct act of faith. In the clear exposition of the fallacy of this theory, it was first shown that there were many serious and fatal objections to the doctrine. As a general principle of construction of all Bible truth, that doctrine, or code of Christian ethics, is the best which is the simplest. In the Scriptures the great doctrine of regeneration, or the new birth, is made so plain that he who runs may read. By repentance and faith the heart is changed and the believer is constituted a new creature in Christ Jesus. The work of God in converting a human soul is perfect and complete, and from that moment the second blessing theory nullifies conversion and causes a confusion of terms. The terms in which these theorists define the second blessing were shown to be the same by which Mr. Wesley defines regeneration, or the new birth. It is true that, as a matter of metaphysical contemplation, theologians are pleased to separate in thought regeneration and sanctification, but this is only a mental disjoiner of things which are always coexistent in point of time. Or, in other words, no one is ever justified who is not sanctified, and being thus in a state of grace, it is his duty and privilege to grow and develop, thus going on to perfection. This view gives conversion its proper significance and importance as taught in the Bible.

Again, it necessitates an unscripural distinction of terms referring to sin, by which they would make the singular form, wherever it appears in the Bible, the synonym of inbred sin, and the plural form refer to actual transgressions of the law of God, when no such distinction is made in the original Greek, both forms being used indiscriminately to denote sin in a generic sense. Moreover, the theory leads to error, in that many who profess to claim that they cannot commit sin. 'Tis true that the wisest of those who are adherents to this belief claim no such absurd perfection for themselves, but many of this school do make the mistaken profession and say they can never become any more holy in this life. Therefore it puts a stop to Christian growth and development.

Finally, it tends to a disregard of the church and its regular constituted authority. Until the seeds of this doctrine were sown within the last few years, there never was known any interference by outside parties with the work of the regular pastor in the territory assigned to his care and oversight by the Annual Conference. Now it has come to pass that even a local preacher from a distant Conference can go out as an evangelist, and by utterly ignoring the preacher in charge of any given circuit in another Conference, hold his "Holiness Meetings," and because, forsooth, the preacher in charge there, nor the membership of the church, do not fall in with him and his aggressive ways, the allegation is made that there is no religion or Christianity in either pastor or people. All such unsolicited interference with the work of the regular constituted ministry, in any given territory, must and will work an injury to the interests of the church. He did not believe that three-fourths of the Methodist church were backsliders and apostates, and that their salvation depended on the acceptance of the second blessing theory of sanctification.

Then were passed in review the Bible worthies who, it is claimed, had gotten the second blessing. By a close examination and reading of what is recorded about Abraham, Jacob, David, Paul, and Apollos, it was shown that no such thing was true in their experiences.

Next it was shown that the descent of the Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost in no way proved the second blessing doctrine. Finally, a number of passages, much quoted on that side, were examined one by one, among them, Acts 19, 1-7, 2 Cor. 1, 15, 1 Cor. 3, 1-3, 1 Thess. 4, 3, 1 John 1, 6-10, and some others much relied on. The conclusion was reached that the doctrine of a second cleansing, after conversion, is not taught in the Bible.

The argument from experience was then taken up. As a last resort, these theorists, when pressed to the wall, always fall back on their experience, and taking this as an infallible deliverance of consciousness, ask, "Well, what are you going to do with our experience?" He said briefly that he believed they had misunderstood their experience. On the other hand are thousands who claim a genuine Christian experience, yet have never accepted the doctrine of a second cleansing. He asked, "Is their experience of no value?" To this question, the reply is made, in effect, if not in words, that those who have not received the second cleansing are still led captive by Satan at his will. And just here he related a piece of personal experience, saying that not long since, while discussing the matter with some of his parishioners, he had to bear the reproach that because he did not believe in this way, his heart was still being stirred up by the devil. Such uncharitable judgment is the outcome of the teachings of this second blessing doctrine. He held, nevertheless, that thorough cleansing is the work of conversion, and that those who claim the second blessing, had, to some extent, backslidden, and the second cleansing which they received was not a higher work completing the first, but a re-conversion, re-instating them in the grace whereto they once stood. The matter, however, will perhaps continue to grow and trouble the church, until the General Conference makes an authoritative deliverance for the Methodist church on the subject.

The foregoing is but a brief and imperfect synopsis of his learned sermon, which was listened to with close attention by a large congregation during the hour and a half of its delivery.

Resolutions of Thanks.

At a meeting of the congregation of St. John's Church, held on February 9th, the following resolutions were adopted, to-wit:

Resolved 1st, That the thanks of this congregation are hereby tendered to Gen. G. A. Washburn and to the Rev. Wm. F. Nichols, D. D., Rector, and the congregation of St. James' Church, Philadelphia, Pa., for the organ given by them to our church.

Resolved 2d, That while we value the organ as a necessary equipment in our service, we still more highly appreciate the kind feeling which prompted the gift, and kind thoughts of the donors will mingle in our hearts with the sweet strains of the music.

Resolved 3d, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to Gen. G. A. Washburn and to the Rev. Wm. F. Nichols, D. D., and also, that they be published in the KEOWEE COURIER.

Seneca City and Other Items.

SENECA, S. C., February 11th, 1890.
DEAR COURIER: Cotton is still coming in. Some has brought as high as 11 cents per pound. Those who had sold for 10, a few days before, were sorry they had not waited a little longer.

The oil mill is in operation and attracts a good deal of attention. This is a new industry in Seneca and promises well.

Mr. Henry Cole's residence is nearly complete and presents a very fine appearance.

Mr. Richardson is also putting up a very nice residence.

Real estate, in some instances, changes hands so rapidly that we can scarcely keep pace with it, as regards the ownership.

On our way to Richland we halted for a few minutes' chat with Mr. Wm. W. Goodman. We found the old gentleman in a state of intense excitement. He told us that some rascal had stabbed his dog, Jack, no doubt intending to kill him in order to get a chance to steal chickens, or something else. He told us he had his eyes open, and should Jack die, the perpetrator would be sure to come to grief, as he was confident there was a law in South Carolina to punish any one who should commit such an outrage on an inoffensive dog. We left him calling loudly for a Henry Bergh to enforce the law in regard to cruelty to animals.

We find Mr. Joe O'Neil, who has charge of Mr. W. D. Caldwell's place, and is preparing to plant a larger crop than last year. He has lately fenced in a nice patch for a garden, and made other improvements. His land is nicely broken up and everything on the place goes to prove that he is the right one to manage a farm in the right way.

Mr. John Ballenger is still making improvements on his place. He has just put up a commodious barn and several other outbuildings, and is having dead trees and stumps dug up, roots and all, leaving his fields looking like an enormous garden.

Mr. E. D. Foster went to Georgia last week to buy a mule. He returned on Saturday quite sick. On Friday night he had a chill, followed by fever and intense pain of the joints. We hear he is some better at this time. Instead of a mule, he brought home a fine young horse, and expects, with the help of his son Willie, to farm on a larger scale than heretofore.

Elbert Foster is quite sick with mumps, of which there have been several cases in the Foster family, and also in other families in this locality.

Mr. Oliver Martin is clearing up preparatory to planting. His hand is about well, and he seems to be making up for lost time. We sometimes stop to talk with Mr. Martin, and always learn from him something worth knowing, that we did not know before. We frequently spend a day with Mr. and Mrs. Martin and enjoy their hospitality very much.

There is now a most excellent school at Richland Station, and we trust all who live near enough will patronize it. When we go visiting among our Rock Springs and Richland friends, we feel like staying there, and should we ever change our place of abode, we should try to get a shelter at or near Richland.

Mr. W. H. Hughes, the resident merchant, has a fine stock of general merchandise which he is selling at reasonable rates. OBSERVER.

The Race in the Third District.

The coming election in the 3d Congressional District of South Carolina promises to have a quite novel interest of its own, both for the participants and the lookers-on. A Democrat will be chosen of course, but the question is which Democrat—Mr. Calhoun or Mr. Benet? The former of these gentlemen has, besides his name, a well earned reputation for ability. He has been (incorrectly) credited with the authorship of that remarkable brochure, "An Appeal to Pharaoh." He works several big plantations, and is said to be a kind employer, but he believes on general principles that the negroes should go, and that it is for South-Carolina's interest to have them go. Mr. Benet, on the contrary, thinks all this talk about deporting the negroes is felderol; the negroes won't go, and it would be a bad business for the South Carolina planters and farmers if they did go. It is given out that the two gentlemen mean to make this question the main and decisive issue in the canvass.—Hartford (Connecticut) Courant.

WASHINGTON, February 10.—In the House to day Wyckham of Ohio introduced for reference a bill, the purpose of which is to prevent gerrymandering in the States. It provides that representatives elected to the Fifty-second Congress shall be returned from the same districts as similar representatives elected to the Fifty-first Congress.

WASHINGTON, February 10.—The President has signed a proclamation opening the Sioux reservation in South Dakota to settlement. He has also issued an order establishing land offices at Pierre and Chamberlain.

The attendance at Furman University has reached 148, the highest known in the history of the institution. The total enrollment last year was about 135.
